Direct Lending Environment & Market Outlook

- We entered 2025 with seemingly more clarity than the past two years. That has changed a lot in the last 30 days, especially from a sentiment perspective. What does this mean for private markets in 2025?
- Economically speaking, the U.S. is in a pretty good place. Corporate earnings growth expanded by 9% in 2024, and the consensus for 2025 is that growth will be higher. The U.S. consumer is providing strong support, buoyed by positive real wage growth, a robust job market and high levels of wealth. The president's prospective tariffs and immigration policy may provide headwinds, but the economy is starting the year in a strong position, which we believe provides a solid foundation for middle market credit and private market activity.
- Despite both headline and core CPI declining significantly since 2022, inflation was stickier than hoped in 2024. Core CPI ended the year above 3%, while the Fed's preferred inflation metric, PCE, remained above its 2% target. Forecasts for both CPI and PCE continue to indicate levels above the Fed's target, which means rates will likely remain elevated. For private markets, we believe this will directly impact weaker businesses and over-levered capital structures, regardless of company size.
- In this context, we focused our investment efforts on companies with more conservative capital structures, which proved broadly challenging in 2024. Given the abundance of private capital raised and an active broadly syndicated loan market, we did not find an attractive risk-return for investments in the upper end of the middle market. However, we consistently found more attractive risk-adjusted opportunities within the lower end of the middle market. Here we have been able to identify opportunities with key risk mitigants, most importantly, lower leverage to provide a 'margin of safety', as well as more attractive covenants and loan documentation to further protect capital. We do not expect that trend to reverse in 2025. As a result, we believe the lower end of the middle market continues to provide one of the best relative risk-returns for investors.
- The one question that everyone seems to want answered: What will M&A activity look like in 2025? Investment banks are entering this year with record backlogs, similar to how they began 2024. Despite this, 2024 volume finished a modest 12% above a fairly anemic 2023. We believe the valuation disconnect between buyers and sellers is the primary culprit. While a robust economy and debt market can tip the scale, despite a prolonged higher rate environment, we believe the real question is "Does it matter?" If you are with the right manager, we believe that answer is no. In 2024 our platform had a record year of investment opportunities despite a modest M&A environment.

Accordingly, such investment products are not suitable for all investors. The Fund is not subject to the same or similar regulatory requirements as mutual funds or other more regulated collective investment vehicles.

Risk Factors

Investors should review the offering documents, including the description of risk factors contained in the Fund's Confidential Private Placement Memorandum (the "Memorandum"), prior to making a decision to invest in the securities described herein. An investment in the Fund involves a high degree of risk and is suitable only for those investors willing to risk losing some or all of their principal investment and who have the experience and ability to evaluate the risks and merits of an investment in the Fund. The Memorandum will include more complete descriptions of the risks described below as well as additional risks relating to, among other things, debt investments, market, credit and interest rate risk, conflicts of interest and regulatory and tax matters. Any decision to invest in the securities described herein should only be made after reviewing such Memorandum, conducting such investigations as the investor deems necessary and consulting the investor's own legal, accounting and tax advisors in order to make an independent determination of the suitability and consequences of an investment in the Fund. The Fund's performance can be volatile. The Investment Manager has total trading authority over the Fund and the use of a single investment manager applying generally similar trading programs could mean lack of diversification and, consequentially, higher risk. The Fund's fees and expenses may offset the Fund's trading profits.

Accredited Investor and Qualified Purchaser Status. Each limited partner in the Fund must represent in writing, among other things, that such limited partner is an "accredited investor" as that term is defined in Regulation D promulgated under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (the "Securities Act"), and a "qualified purchaser" as that term is defined in Section 2(A)(51) of the 1940 Act or a "knowledgeable employee" as that term is defined in Rule 3c-5(A)(4)(I) of Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act").

Limited History. The Adviser has limited operating history upon which investors can evaluate their past performance. Despite the Adviser's affiliation with Fidelity Investments, there can be no assurance that the strategy will achieve its investment objectives. An investor must rely upon the ability of the Adviser and its investment professionals in identifying and implementing investments consistent with the strategy's investment objectives and policies.

Illiquid Investments and Restrictions on Withdrawal. An investment in the strategy is suitable only for certain sophisticated investors that have no need for immediate liquidity in respect of their investment and who can accept the risks associated with investing in illiquid investments.

Failure to Achieve Investment Objective. The Adviser cannot provide assurances that it will be able to identify, choose, make or realize investments of the type targeted for the strategy. There is also no guarantee that the Adviser will be able to source attractive investments for the strategy within a reasonable period of time. There can be no assurance that the strategy will be able to generate returns for the investors or that returns will be commensurate with the risks of the investments. The strategy may not be able to achieve its investment objective and investors may lose some or all of their invested capital. The failure by the strategy to obtain indebtedness on favorable terms or in the desired amount will adversely affect the returns realized by the strategy and impair the strategy's ability to achieve its investment objective.

No Assurance the Strategy Will be Able to Obtain Leverage. The strategy will seek to regularly employ a significant amount of direct or indirect leverage in a variety of forms through borrowings, derivatives and other financial instruments as part of its investment program. However, there can be no assurance that the strategy will be able to obtain indebtedness at all or to the desired degree or that indebtedness will be accessible by the strategy at any time or in connection with any particular investment. If indebtedness is available to the strategy, there can be no assurance that such indebtedness will be available in the desired amount or on terms favorable to the strategy and/or terms comparable to terms obtained by competitors.

Use of Leverage. The strategy will seek to employ direct or indirect leverage in a variety of forms, including through borrowings, derivatives, and other financial instruments as part of its investment program, which leverage is expected to be secured by the Fund's assets. The greater the total leverage of the strategy relative to its assets, the greater the risk of loss and possibility of gain due to changes in the values of its investments.

Portfolio Valuation. The Adviser, subject to the oversight of the Board, will determine the valuation of the strategy's investments. It is expected that most of the strategy's investments will not have readily available market quotations, which will require the Adviser to estimate, in accordance with the Adviser's valuation policies, the fair value of such investments on the valuation date. Fair value pricing is based on subjective judgments, and it is possible that the fair value of a security may differ materially from the value that would be realized if the security were sold. Absent bad faith or manifest error, valuation determinations of the Adviser will be conclusive and binding on the strategy's investors.

Risk Factors

Due Diligence Risk. When conducting due diligence and making an assessment regarding a potential investment, the Adviser will be required to rely on resources available to it, including internal sources of information as well as information provided by existing and potential obligors, any equity sponsor(s), lenders and other independent sources. The due diligence process may at times rely on limited or incomplete information.

Possession of Material Non-Public Information, Limiting the Adviser's Discretion. From time to time, the Adviser (in its capacity as investment manager of investment vehicles, funds or accounts or in connection with investment activities on its own behalf) and its affiliates receive material non-public information with respect to issuers of publicly-traded securities or other securities in connection with, among other examples, acquisitions, refinancings, restructurings of such issuers that the Adviser reviews or participates in, oftentimes unrelated to its management of the strategy. In such circumstances, the Fund may be prohibited, by law, contract or by virtue of the Adviser's policies and procedures, from (i) selling all or a portion of a position in such issuer, thereby potentially incurring trading losses as a result, (ii) establishing an initial position or taking any greater position in such issuer, and (iii) pursuing other investment opportunities related to such issuer. In order to prevent the portfolio managers of the strategy from receiving material, non-public information that may prevent them from being able to trade in investments in other accounts the portfolio managers manage, portfolio management personnel (including the portfolio managers, research analysts, and traders) may be subject to information barriers and prevented from accessing certain information regarding Fund investments to which investors are otherwise entitled, such as information about a borrower's business prospects, financial situation and liquidity situation.

Dependence on Investment Team. The strategy has no operating history upon which prospective Investors can evaluate performance. No guarantee or representation is made that the strategy will achieve its investment objective or that Investors will not lose all or substantially all of their investment in the strategy. The past performance of the Manager or its affiliates is no guarantee of the future performance of the strategy. There is no assurance that the strategy will be profitable.

Lack of Diversification. The strategy is not considered to be a diversified strategy and may invest a significant portion of its assets in securities of a single issuer. To the extent that the strategy assumes large positions in the securities of a small number of issuers, its net asset value may fluctuate to a greater extent than that of a diversified strategy as a result of changes in the financial condition or the market's assessment of the issuer. The strategy may also be more susceptible to any single economic or regulatory occurrence than a diversified strategy.

General Credit Risks. The strategy may be exposed to losses resulting from default and foreclosure of any such loans or interests in loans in which it has invested. Therefore, the value of underlying collateral, the creditworthiness of borrowers and the priority of liens are each of great importance in determining the value of the strategy's investments. In the event of foreclosure, the strategy or an affiliate thereof may assume direct ownership of any assets collateralizing such foreclosed loans. The liquidation proceeds upon the sale of such assets may not satisfy the entire outstanding balance of principal and interest on such foreclosed loans, resulting in a loss to the Fund. Any costs or delays involved in the effectuation of loan foreclosures or liquidation of the assets collateralizing such foreclosed loans will further reduce proceeds associated therewith and, consequently, increase possible losses to the strategy. In addition, no assurances can be made that borrowers or third parties will not assert claims in connection with foreclosure proceedings or otherwise, or that such claims will not interfere with the enforcement of the strategy's rights.

Other Funds and Accounts. The Fidelity personnel responsible for making investments on behalf of the strategy are also responsible for making investments on behalf of other funds and accounts.

Risk of the Strategy's Investments. The strategy intends to invest primarily in securities that are rated below investment grade by rating agencies or that would be rated below investment grade if they were rated. Below investment grade securities, which are often referred to as "junk," have predominantly speculative characteristics with respect to the issuer's capacity to pay interest and repay principal. They may also be illiquid and difficult to value.
