Direct Lending Environment & Market Outlook

- The early days of the new administration have introduced heightened uncertainty into the investment landscape, especially in regards to tariffs. Given that markets have been shaped by increasing bilateral trade over the past 80 years, there is little precedent to guide us on potential second and third-order consequences, if any, and their impact on the modern economy. This uncertainty is compounded by the President's negotiating style, making the likely outcomes and paths even more unclear. However, history has shown that in turbulent markets, the U.S. economy has typically benefited from its scale, diversity and resilience in absorbing macroeconomic shocks relative to others.
- Credit can be a safe haven during turbulent markets if the underlying portfolio is sound. The key to being a successful credit investor is obsessing over "What could go wrong?" before making an investment. This includes considerations ranging from evaluating borrower-specific risk factors to systemic or macroeconomic stress exposure. By assessing these vulnerabilities, our team focuses on companies likely to show greater resilience during times of stress. Even more crucial is how our experience guides us toward capital structures with a proper margin of safety for a prospective investment, should the underlying borrower not perform as expected. This margin of safety includes modest leverage and reasonable loan documentation with real financial covenants to further protect us from the proverbial "unknown unknowns."
- Given the growth of the asset class, we suspect that not all credit investors operated in a sound manner and chose to deploy capital – to grow in the new and expansive upper mid-market or to survive as a smaller lender in an increasingly scaled direct lending world – versus make credit by credit investments. As a result, we believe the cracks of dispersion seen amid direct lenders in 2024 have the potential to widen, particularly in portfolios with a meaningful portion of loans originated in the "2021 vintage" or before to the pandemic. Although this may serve as a painful reminder of the importance of manager selection, we view it positively for the long-term health of the market.
- Should the ultimate tariff impact, or negotiations thereof, serve as a catalyst for an economic pullback or recession, our portfolios will certainly not be immune. We believe that the majority of our portfolio will be resilient in the face of tariffs or a downturn, despite knowing that beliefs tend to be challenged in the most stressful of times. We gain comfort in our rigorous underwriting process and a diversified investment portfolio, comprised predominantly of first lien, senior secured loans to US based companies operating with modest levels of leverage that offer non-deferrable services or have business models not meaningfully impacted by imports. Hopefully you gain comfort in the fact that if our assumptions are incorrect, the majority of our loans have reasonable loan documentation and real financial covenants that when combined with our teams' substantial experience, should allow us to weather any economic storm and deliver you an acceptable return relative to the market and competitors.
- While each stress episode is unique, the formula for successful outcome is much less variable. We acknowledge that we may not be perfect in our execution, but we will strive to be, as we understand that investment discipline plays a crucial role in determining how well managers and their portfolios emerge from times of stress like these.

Accordingly, such investment products are not suitable for all investors. The Fund is not subject to the same or similar regulatory requirements as mutual funds or other more regulated collective investment vehicles.

Risk Factors

Investors should review the offering documents, including the description of risk factors contained in the Fund's Confidential Private Placement Memorandum (the "Memorandum"), prior to making a decision to invest in the securities described herein. An investment in the Fund involves a high degree of risk and is suitable only for those investors willing to risk losing some or all of their principal investment and who have the experience and ability to evaluate the risks and merits of an investment in the Fund. The Memorandum will include more complete descriptions of the risks described below as well as additional risks relating to, among other things, debt investments, market, credit and interest rate risk, conflicts of interest and regulatory and tax matters. Any decision to invest in the securities described herein should only be made after reviewing such Memorandum, conducting such investigations as the investor deems necessary and consulting the investor's own legal, accounting and tax advisors in order to make an independent determination of the suitability and consequences of an investment in the Fund. The Fund's performance can be volatile. The Investment Manager has total trading authority over the Fund and the use of a single investment manager applying generally similar trading programs could mean lack of diversification and, consequentially, higher risk. The Fund's fees and expenses may offset the Fund's trading profits.

Accredited Investor and Qualified Purchaser Status. Each limited partner in the Fund must represent in writing, among other things, that such limited partner is an "accredited investor" as that term is defined in Regulation D promulgated under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (the "Securities Act"), and a "qualified purchaser" as that term is defined in Section 2(A)(51) of the 1940 Act or a "knowledgeable employee" as that term is defined in Rule 3c-5(A)(4)(I) of Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act").

Limited History. The Adviser has limited operating history upon which investors can evaluate their past performance. Despite the Adviser's affiliation with Fidelity Investments, there can be no assurance that the strategy will achieve its investment objectives. An investor must rely upon the ability of the Adviser and its investment professionals in identifying and implementing investments consistent with the strategy's investment objectives and policies.

Illiquid Investments and Restrictions on Withdrawal. An investment in the strategy is suitable only for certain sophisticated investors that have no need for immediate liquidity in respect of their investment and who can accept the risks associated with investing in illiquid investments.

Failure to Achieve Investment Objective. The Adviser cannot provide assurances that it will be able to identify, choose, make or realize investments of the type targeted for the strategy. There is also no guarantee that the Adviser will be able to source attractive investments for the strategy within a reasonable period of time. There can be no assurance that the strategy will be able to generate returns for the investors or that returns will be commensurate with the risks of the investments. The strategy may not be able to achieve its investment objective and investors may lose some or all of their invested capital. The failure by the strategy to obtain indebtedness on favorable terms or in the desired amount will adversely affect the returns realized by the strategy and impair the strategy's ability to achieve its investment objective.

No Assurance the Strategy Will be Able to Obtain Leverage. The strategy will seek to regularly employ a significant amount of direct or indirect leverage in a variety of forms through borrowings, derivatives and other financial instruments as part of its investment program. However, there can be no assurance that the strategy will be able to obtain indebtedness at all or to the desired degree or that indebtedness will be accessible by the strategy at any time or in connection with any particular investment. If indebtedness is available to the strategy, there can be no assurance that such indebtedness will be available in the desired amount or on terms favorable to the strategy and/or terms comparable to terms obtained by competitors.

Use of Leverage. The strategy will seek to employ direct or indirect leverage in a variety of forms, including through borrowings, derivatives, and other financial instruments as part of its investment program, which leverage is expected to be secured by the Fund's assets. The greater the total leverage of the strategy relative to its assets, the greater the risk of loss and possibility of gain due to changes in the values of its investments.

Portfolio Valuation. The Adviser, subject to the oversight of the Board, will determine the valuation of the strategy's investments. It is expected that most of the strategy's investments will not have readily available market quotations, which will require the Adviser to estimate, in accordance with the Adviser's valuation policies, the fair value of such investments on the valuation date. Fair value pricing is based on subjective judgments, and it is possible that the fair value of a security may differ materially from the value that would be realized if the security were sold. Absent bad faith or manifest error, valuation determinations of the Adviser will be conclusive and binding on the strategy's investors.

Risk Factors

Due Diligence Risk. When conducting due diligence and making an assessment regarding a potential investment, the Adviser will be required to rely on resources available to it, including internal sources of information as well as information provided by existing and potential obligors, any equity sponsor(s), lenders and other independent sources. The due diligence process may at times rely on limited or incomplete information.

Possession of Material Non-Public Information, Limiting the Adviser's Discretion. From time to time, the Adviser (in its capacity as investment manager of investment vehicles, funds or accounts or in connection with investment activities on its own behalf) and its affiliates receive material non-public information with respect to issuers of publicly-traded securities or other securities in connection with, among other examples, acquisitions, refinancings, restructurings of such issuers that the Adviser reviews or participates in, oftentimes unrelated to its management of the strategy. In such circumstances, the Fund may be prohibited, by law, contract or by virtue of the Adviser's policies and procedures, from (i) selling all or a portion of a position in such issuer, thereby potentially incurring trading losses as a result, (ii) establishing an initial position or taking any greater position in such issuer, and (iii) pursuing other investment opportunities related to such issuer. In order to prevent the portfolio managers of the strategy from receiving material, non-public information that may prevent them from being able to trade in investments in other accounts the portfolio managers manage, portfolio management personnel (including the portfolio managers, research analysts, and traders) may be subject to information barriers and prevented from accessing certain information regarding Fund investments to which investors are otherwise entitled, such as information about a borrower's business prospects, financial situation and liquidity situation.

Dependence on Investment Team. The strategy has no operating history upon which prospective Investors can evaluate performance. No guarantee or representation is made that the strategy will achieve its investment objective or that Investors will not lose all or substantially all of their investment in the strategy. The past performance of the Manager or its affiliates is no guarantee of the future performance of the strategy. There is no assurance that the strategy will be profitable.

Lack of Diversification. The strategy is not considered to be a diversified strategy and may invest a significant portion of its assets in securities of a single issuer. To the extent that the strategy assumes large positions in the securities of a small number of issuers, its net asset value may fluctuate to a greater extent than that of a diversified strategy as a result of changes in the financial condition or the market's assessment of the issuer. The strategy may also be more susceptible to any single economic or regulatory occurrence than a diversified strategy.

General Credit Risks. The strategy may be exposed to losses resulting from default and foreclosure of any such loans or interests in loans in which it has invested. Therefore, the value of underlying collateral, the creditworthiness of borrowers and the priority of liens are each of great importance in determining the value of the strategy's investments. In the event of foreclosure, the strategy or an affiliate thereof may assume direct ownership of any assets collateralizing such foreclosed loans. The liquidation proceeds upon the sale of such assets may not satisfy the entire outstanding balance of principal and interest on such foreclosed loans, resulting in a loss to the Fund. Any costs or delays involved in the effectuation of loan foreclosures or liquidation of the assets collateralizing such foreclosed loans will further reduce proceeds associated therewith and, consequently, increase possible losses to the strategy. In addition, no assurances can be made that borrowers or third parties will not assert claims in connection with foreclosure proceedings or otherwise, or that such claims will not interfere with the enforcement of the strategy's rights.

Other Funds and Accounts. The Fidelity personnel responsible for making investments on behalf of the strategy are also responsible for making investments on behalf of other funds and accounts.

Risk of the Strategy's Investments. The strategy intends to invest primarily in securities that are rated below investment grade by rating agencies or that would be rated below investment grade if they were rated. Below investment grade securities, which are often referred to as "junk," have predominantly speculative characteristics with respect to the issuer's capacity to pay interest and repay principal. They may also be illiquid and difficult to value.
