² The definition of the term "development" is not consistent across the portfolio companies. Regardless of how a portfolio company uses this term, it is worth noting that not all projects in "development" will mature into completed towers.

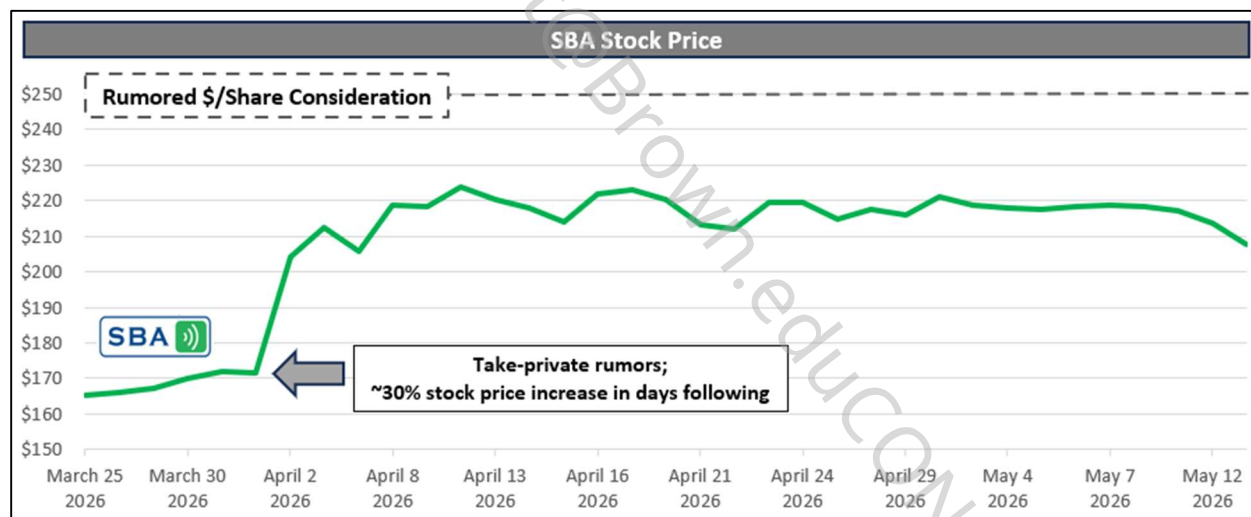

What We Are Seeing

In this edition of “What We Are Seeing,” we are going to touch on two newsworthy topics.

First, we want to bring you up to speed on EchoStar, the parent company of DISH.³ As you may recall, in last quarter’s edition of WWAS, we recounted a decade of DISH history and noted that DISH had stopped paying its tower rental obligations to all of the tower companies.⁴ Why? DISH claims – outrageously, we would suggest – that because the company is selling its spectrum at the FCC’s urging, the force majeure clause in its tower leases was triggered. In essence, DISH is claiming that an event equivalent to an “act of God” resulted in the company selling assets for more than $40 billion and excused the company from paying its contractual tower rental obligations. As a result, most of the public and private towercos have initiated litigation against DISH.

The update, and good news, is that the FCC has conditioned the transfer of DISH’s spectrum licenses on DISH placing $2.4 billion in escrow⁵ to ensure that there is capital to fund damage awards to the aforementioned litigants should they prevail. The inclusion of this condition was a direct result of the efforts of the Wireless Infrastructure Association, a group supported by TPG Peppertree and the towercos. Whether $2.4 billion will be sufficient is unclear, but (a) it will go a long way and (b) we do not believe it will be the sole source for recovery. Moreover, any net impact to us is likely to be partially offset by increased capacity needs by AT&T (one of the spectrum buyers) resulting in future colo and amendment potential over time.

Second, let’s discuss rumors about SBA Communications Corporation (“SBA”). SBA is one of the three US publicly traded tower companies, the other two being American Tower Corporation and Crown Castle Inc. It was recently rumored that KKR and Brookfield Asset Management were leading an effort to take SBA private.⁶

Source: Capital IQ

Analysts believe a $250 share price would be necessary for the offer to be successful, implying an enterprise value of roughly $40 billion and requiring roughly $15 billion in the form of new equity.⁷ A deal of this size would not only be the largest tower deal ever, it would rank as one of the top five largest leveraged buyouts in history – well above RJR Nabisco, of Barbarians at the Gate fame. Thus, it was not a huge surprise to learn from publicly available information that the proposed transaction may have been put on pause, perhaps indefinitely.⁸

What is the take-away? SBA used to be an aggressive builder of US towers. Over the last several years, however, they virtually exited the US build-to-suit market, and their only recent acquisition of note was of 7,000 towers from wireless carrier Millicom International which operates under the Tigo brand throughout Latin America. In fact, of SBA’s 46,000 towers, only 17,000 are in

³ For the sake of simplicity, we have included references to EchoStar and DISH somewhat interchangeably throughout this WWAS; however, technically speaking, they are separate legal entities and there are multiple EchoStar subsidiaries which include the name “Dish”.

⁴ To put this in perspective, DISH accounts for roughly 3% of revenue for all of TPG Peppertree’s portfolio companies. It is also noteworthy that virtually all of this revenue was either (a) colocation (as opposed to build-to-suit) revenue or (b) acquired in acquisitions where little or no value was ascribed to it. In other words, it wasn’t derived from expending capital to build towers for DISH as we were suspect of DISH’s creditworthiness. With regard to the word “all,” it is conceivable that DISH may be paying tower rent to someone – but it isn’t any of the public companies and it isn’t any of the private tower companies that we or the industry association is aware of.

⁶ Barron’s, “SBA Communications Stock Soars on Buyout Interest. What It Means for Tower Stocks,” April 9, 2026.

⁷ Wells Fargo, Take-Private Economics May Make Sense; But Is SBAC a Willing Seller, April 7, 2026.

⁸ MSN, “SBA Communications sinks near close on report of exclusive talks with KKR,” May 2026.

the US – and fewer than 100 of those were built by SBA in the past five years.⁹ The bottom line is that SBA and the other publicly traded towercos do not compete with TPG Peppertree in any meaningful sense, and we believe that their assets do not compare to ours in terms of quality, geography, or growth prospects, and, therefore, they trade at a significant discount relative to where our assets have historically transacted. To give an example, TPG Peppertree portfolio company APC Towers III sold the majority of its towers last year at a tower cash flow multiple in the high 30s. A price tag of roughly $40 billion for SBA implies approximately 20x EBITDA.¹⁰ One could argue that both valuations are rational.

⁹ SBA quarterly and annual earnings reports.

¹⁰ Keep in mind that when we sell a portfolio, it rarely includes any SG&A. We are selling pure tower cash flow which will require little additional SG&A by the acquirer to manage; it's plug and play to an acquirer with scale. Contrast that with the sale of a company like SBA which includes approximately $270MM of annual SG&A.
