What We Are Seeing

While we hope many readers appreciate our insights, we acknowledge that occasionally it may be helpful to hear from others that are active in the tower and digital infrastructure space. In a twist on "What We are Seeing," we are going to defer to industry executives and experts for this quarter's commentary; let's call it "What Others are Seeing." So, without further ado:

"In the U.S., activity levels continue to improve.... The [lease-up] backlog also remains healthy which bodes well for the remainder of the year and into 2026.... I am optimistic about domestic organic growth opportunities over the next year or two due to the specific initiatives of each of our major customers, but I am also optimistic about the long term. The growth in fixed wireless access subscribers for all of our MNO customers, the expanding number of ² The definition of the term "development" is not consistent across the portfolio companies. Regardless of how a portfolio company uses this term, it is worth noting that not all projects in "development" will mature into completed towers.

AI intensive applications, 5G advanced enabled new use cases and the opportunity for incremental spectrum auctions are all supportive of sustained long-term growth.”³

– Brendan Cavanagh, President and CEO of SBA

“[Carriers] continue to expand and mature their 5G networks as they work toward aggressive coverage and quality targets between now and the end of the decade.... And increasingly data-intensive and uplink use cases with mobile video, AI and new devices will continue to stress networks and prompt both mid-band coverage and capacity-driven 5G activity across our tower footprint and rooftop sites.”⁴

– Steven Vondran, President and CEO of American Tower

“On a combined basis [amendments and colocations], total application volumes increased more than 50% year-over-year...”⁵

– Steven Vondran, President and CEO of American Tower

“The 5G cycle might be longer just because the quantum of incremental data continues to grow. So even though the percentage of data growth in the U.S. is relatively consistent, because the base is growing, you're getting an increase in just the amount of data that needs to be trafficked over the networks, which we think is going to take a long time for our customers to continue to build out their networks to withstand all that incremental demand.”⁶

– Daniel Schlanger, Interim President and CEO of Crown Castle

“That technology [artificial intelligence] will ultimately follow us where we are, which is mobile.”⁷

– Daniel Schlanger, Interim President and CEO of Crown Castle

“Through 2Q25, commentaries from the managements of the Big Three towercos largely echoed the tone from the 1Q25 earning calls regarding carrier activity. We expect T-Mobile to remain the primary driver, with Verizon and AT&T also increasing their activity levels.”⁸

– Jonathan Atkin, RBC (Equity Research)

““Our new colo applications in the first half of 2025 are up over 100%.... We also think there's tailwind in carrier investments in the next 3 years. So we're very optimistic about our future with respect to sales growth.”⁹

– Douglas Chambers, Interim President and CEO of Array Digital Infrastructure (formerly UScellular)

“We're continuously pushing across multiple strategies to widen our lead and cause the rest of the market to follow. That's why we're out there with greenfield builds having already lit up 1,000 sites year-to-date with a plan to bring on nearly 4,000 sites this year alone.”¹⁰

– Michael Sievert, President and CEO of T-Mobile

“We feel great about the steps we're taking to be the best connectivity provider in America and how this industry is positioned to evolve over the next decade. Investment and policy tailwinds are as strong as I can remember since maybe the Telecommunications Act of 1996.”¹¹

– John Stankey, Chairman and CEO of AT&T

“We view fixed wireless as a continued great opportunity for us for the right customer segments.... It's effectively a mobile business.”¹²

– John Stankey, Chairman and CEO of AT&T

“The macro tower remains the most cost-effective manner to deliver a gigabyte of mobile data.”¹³

– Steven Vondran, President and CEO of American Tower

"[With the acquisition of Peppertree,] TPG is poised to benefit from major secular tailwinds, where themes like 5G, the Internet of Things, and burgeoning artificial-intelligence demands are creating a surge in wireless data consumption."¹⁴

– Barron's

What's the key takeaway? As you have heard us say time and time again, the demand for data will overwhelm the wireless networks for the foreseeable future. (And, next quarter, we'll revert back to "What We are Seeing.")
